

The Magic of Pan (Paperback)

By Ellen M James

Createspace, United States, 2015. Paperback. Condition: New. Language: English . Brand New Book  Print on Demand .Jenny, an only child, awaits the arrival of her cousins with a degree of fear and trepidation. She lives comfortably in her own dream world and it is whilst sitting under the old oak tree in the garden that she comes into contact with one of the garden helpers - the tree spirit. Of course, when her confident cousins, Tilly and George, arrive they don't believe a word she says, until, that is, they see helpers of their own. And that is when the adventures really begin! The children meet Abbos, a very old man and monk-like figure, who becomes their guide and mentor throughout and who appears at some point during each of the tests that they are obliged to undertake. They discover a world of elementals who should be working and co-habiting happily under the leadership of the Great God Pan, a mythical creature. Unfortunately Pan has fallen into the never-ending sleep of great despair having seen the continuing damage that human beings are inflicting on his world and their great disrespect for the environment and all that Mother Earth...
